Global stocks hit record highs in the three months to September 30th as they rose for the sixth quarter in seven after reports showed stimulus is helping reopening economies recover from the pandemic, the Federal Reserve indicated it would keep rates low for a while yet, and tech stocks reported earnings that showed how much they have benefited from the shift to online. During the quarter, 10 of the 11 sectors rose in US-dollar terms. Consumer Discretionary (+16%) rose the most as economies reopened while Energy (-16%) was the sector that declined.

U.S. stocks set fresh record highs after readings showed the jobs market had recovered nearly half the jobs lost when the economy was closed to restrict the pandemic, Big Tech shone, and the Federal Reserve moved to a flexible average inflation target by allowing inflation to exceed 2%. The Fed's shift suggested lower interest rates for longer as it indicated the central bank would not pre-emptively raise interest rates when unemployment was low so long as inflation was under control. During the quarter, reports indicated the U.S. economy was recovering from the record 31.4% annualised decline in the second quarter. Of note, a report showed the jobless rate fell to 8.4% in August and that the economy had added 10.6 million jobs since it shredded 22.2 million jobs in March and April when the jobless rate was 14.7% (compared with 3.5% in February). Big Tech CEOs survived a grilling from Congress over the alleged anti-competitive nature of their businesses as the tech icons posted healthy earnings for the second quarter. In political news, the Democratic and Republican parties held their conventions and at quarter end polls placed Democrat presidential nominee and former Vice President Joe Biden ahead of President Donald Trump in the quest for the White House.

European stocks fell as reinfection rates picked up enough for restrictions to be reimposed. Of note during the quarter was that EU leaders struck an agreement to allow the EU to sell debt on a large scale for the first time so it could install a 750-billion-euro pandemic recovery fund.

The Fund recorded a positive return for the quarter. Stocks that contributed the most included the investments in Xcel Energy of the U.S., American Water Works, and CSX and Union Pacific, two North American railroad companies. Xcel Energy rose after the monopoly provider of electricity and gas services across eight mid-western U.S. states announced a higher-than-expected jump of 18% in earnings-per-share growth for the second quarter and management reiterated its 2020 and long-term earnings guidance. American Water Works, the largest listed water utility in the U.S., rose as investors appeared to continue to favour its low-risk business model. CSX and Union Pacific, which are regarded as bellwethers of economic activity in North America, rose as U.S. states relaxed pandemic-related restrictions.

Stocks that detracted included the investments in FirstEnergy of the U.S., Vinci of France and Atlas Arteria of Australia. FirstEnergy plunged after the U.S. Attorney's Office of Ohio charged House Speaker Larry Householder and five others with bribery and money-laundering charges tied to a bill that effectively was a US$1.5 billion bailout of a former subsidiary of FirstEnergy's nuclear plants in the U.S. state. Vinci dived after the economic blow associated with the pandemic reduced the first-half revenue of the concessions and construction company by 15%. Atlas Arteria fell over the quarter as surging infection rates in France, the location of its largest asset, led to concerns regarding greater mobility restrictions.

Notwithstanding our expectations for greater volatility in the short to medium term driven by the COVID-19 crisis, we are confident that the underlying businesses that we have included in our defined universe and in our investment strategy will prove resilient over the longer term. We regard the businesses that we invest in to be of high quality and, while short-term movements in share prices reflect issues of the day, we expect that share prices in the longer term will reflect the underlying cash flows leading to investment returns consistent with our expectations.

The Fund seeks to provide investors with attractive risk-adjusted returns from infrastructure securities. It does this by investing in a portfolio of listed infrastructure companies that meet our strict definition of infrastructure at discounts to their assessed intrinsic value. We believe that infrastructure assets, with requisite earnings reliability and a linkage of earnings to inflation, offer attractive, long-term investment propositions. Furthermore, given the resilient nature of earnings and the structural linkage of those earnings to inflation, investment returns generated by infrastructure stocks are different from standard asset classes and offer investors diversification when included in an investment portfolio. In the current uncertain economic and investment climate, the reliable financial performance of infrastructure investments makes them attractive and an investment in listed infrastructure can be expected to reward patient investors with a long-term time frame.
